

CODING BEGINNER

for sub-project in legal tech startup

(ReactJS / Node.JS)

(m/w/d)

PROJECT OVERVIEW

Use this opportunity to boost your practical experience with your own encapsulated sub-project within our code base. Help us on our way to complete the first beta version of our intelligent and modular legal text editing and content management web application.

OUR COMPANY

18points is a legal tech startup with an interdisciplinary team. We are aiming to build the next blueprint of legal text production and content management from the ground up and in accordance with the highest standards in UI and UX.

TEAM ORGANIZATION

You will report directly to the CTO and CPO. You will contribute to the roadmap definition and work independently under agile scrum organization in 2-week sprints. You will also participate in remote meetings with the entire team.

YOUR CHALLENGE

Work on your own small feature within the code base of the unreleased beta. Guidance and specifications will be provided by us - and there will always be someone available to answer your questions.

REQUIRED SKILLS

- A few months of coding experience and some completed personal coding projects are highly desirable.
- Lots of motivation to test and develop your skills on a small production project.
- Initial experience with Web standards (HTML, CSS, JavaScript, HTTP/REST).
- Prior experience in ReactJS is a plus - or you have got the time and motivation to commit to a video course to get rolling 🇩🇪.
- Language: English is required. German is a plus.

WHAT'S IN IT FOR YOU?

- Get insights into the legal tech and startup world.
- Gain experience in a professional coding environment.
- Boost your skills on a personal project building on our production-tested code base and APIs.
- Dive into new technologies or deepen existing knowledge.
- Work in a dynamic small team and contribute your own ideas and thoughts.
- Work completely remote from anywhere at any time.
- Get the chance to become a member of the 18points team.
